Cheap Holidays to Spain - Tips on Minimizing Your Expenditure

Because the Euro has become stronger amidst the increasing food and fuel costs, traveling to Spain has never been more accessible. Add to that the introduction of budget airfares, hostels, and cost-saving travel packages. These and other factors have made visiting Spain inexpensive and possible. Better yet, you can cut expenses even more, especially on transportation and accommodation, if you want to spend cheap holidays to Spain. Just follow these clever tips.

1. Reserve your flight months in advance to get the cheapest flights. Try not to book flights that are close to your travel date since the costs may be extremely high. However, take note that some airlines offer last-minute deals to fill up the aircraft's seats.
2. Share accommodation in youth hostels with your travel partner if you decide you don't need a private room. Backpackers worldwide opt for hostels since they're inexpensive and allow you to make friends with other budget travelers. An even cheaper way is couch surfing, a hospitality service wherein a resident lets you sleep in his home (specifically a couch) for free or with a very low fee. There are lots of sites that enable you to contact folks who are willing to let you stay in their homes for a a night or two.
3. For cheap holidays to Spain, try the bus. Traveling by bus is generally cheaper than traveling by train although you can already save a lot when traveling by train. Do not use rental cars or taxis---they are very costly.
4. If you want to explore the areas around major cities such as Barcelona and Madrid, use the metro systems, or subways. They are very inexpensive and simple to use. Even better, you can just walk to visit places of interest. Walking around allows you to explore the areas even closer and does not cost a cent.
5. If you can, take carry-on luggage only, especially if you are planning a short trip. Many airlines lets you pay for check-in bags, so traveling with hand luggage only can save costs. But note that for long vacations, this is not possible. If you need to carry check-in baggage, keep it light.
