Protection dogs that get selected for breeding should always be the pick of their litter, and the very best of their bloodlines. Nevertheless, even the strongest and sturdiest safety dog will have to have special attention through pregnancy. This article will provide ideas on how to ease the process of pregnancy and prepare your canine for labor and whelping.

After conception, the newborn puppies must arrive in about 54-72 times. The typical is about 62 times, but you must constantly be prepared a minimum of a week in advance. Unlike humans, the hormone levels don't change in the dog in the course of pregnancy. Due to the fact of this, the only method to figure out if your canine is pregnant is as a result of an ultrasound. Puppies must be detectable as a result of ultrasound after about 25 times from conception. Immediately after about 45 times, the skeletons in the pups must be visible as a result of x-ray. Although an x-ray it is not essential, it can support to know the number and size in the pups beforehand to be able to be better prepared for any problems in the course of whelping.

During pregnancy, you really should steer clear of giving your puppy nutritional supplements. Large high quality puppy food really should be enough to give your puppy and her pups the vitamins and calories they have to have. You really should also begin taking your dogs temperature. The average rectal temperature of a puppy is between 100 to 102.5 degrees, Fahrenheit. Approximately 24 hours prior to whelping, your canines temperature will drop by a couple degrees. This really should be a good indicator that she is very close to giving birth.

About a week ahead of whelping is expected, you must prepare a suitable spot for the whelping to occur. Encourage the Dam to sleep in this spot so that you can permit her to get comfortable with it. It truly is essential that this spot be a secure, quiet spot, away from activity and noise. The purpose in the whelping box would be to assist maintain the puppies warm and secure. The box may be built out of plywood or cardboard. The sides in the whelping box must be higher enough to protect the puppies from drafts, but leave the front open to permit the Dam to enter and leave the box comfortably. The box must be lined thickly with newspapers, or an old blanket if a single is offered. You must also gently wash the underside in the mother ahead of whelping. As the puppies are born, you'll need to put them inside a warm spot, kept in their mothers sight. A basket having a heating pad or warm water bottle will work well.

Regardless of whether your canine can be a Protection Dog, Guard Dog or Security Dog, the above steps will help the pregnancy of your German Shepherd, Belgian Malinois or Dutch Shepherd go as smoothly and comfortably as achievable.
