Selecting The Ideal Lanzarote Holiday Villas For The Awesome Vacation

If you are planning a holiday in Lanzarote you will find that there are many different types of places to stay. With everything from 5 star luxury hotels through to cheap and cheerful apartments in the main resorts available on this unique little Canary Island and all just a four hour flight from the UK.

Lanzarote first came to prominence as a holiday hot spot during the package holiday boom years of the 1970's and 1980's. Featuring as an all year round destination in the brochures of the time and by 1993 the island was welcoming 2 million visitor every year. Lanzarote remains very popular today, but tourist numbers have tailed off a little, partly as a result of increased competition from other, newer destinations such as Egypt and Turkey.

Despite the increased competition though, the island still remains a popular holiday choice though, not least as it offers such a diversity of different accommodation options, which means Lanzarote is able to cater to all budgets and tastes.

Private villas have grown in attractiveness over the past decade and there are currently around 10,000 Lanzarote Villas available for hire in all locations across the island. With the bulk of these concentrated in the three main resorts. And virtually all have their own swimming pools and can be rented out all year round thanks to Lanzarote's amazing climate. And with prices ranging from €450 per week upwards depending on location and time of year, there's plenty to shout about.

Puerto del Carmen holiday villas re normally larger and better built than similar properties in other resorts and hence command higher rental rates. So if you are thinking about booking a break in the island's oldest and largest resort you will need to allow upward of €600 per week, possibly more if you book during peak periods or plan to visit with a large group of people.

As well as holiday villas in Lanzarote you'll find 200 plus hotels to choose from too. Six 5 star establishments cater to the upper end of the tourist market, with the bulk of these establishments offering 4 star accommodation. Playa Blanca is the resort to head for if you are looking for a good value break as the hotels here are much newer and there is a much greater range of choice than in either Puerto del Carmen or Costa Teguise. Lanzarote boast an excellent selection of hotel to suit any budget.
