It is popular to register for wedding gifts at local retailers, doing this makes it easier for your guests to buy you a present that you want rather than just leaving it up to them. If you do this, be sure to register at local retailers that have chains across the country or have websites available so your guests can easily access your wishes.

As the bride, it is very important that you have a dress that you feel mentally comfortable in. If you are very self-conscious in your wedding dress, you will be very unhappy during the event. The wedding lasts a long time and it is your night, so you want to be happy and comfortable the entire time!

Consider having your wedding in a public park. Venues can be extremely expensive, but a park offers you a large, beautiful space at a fraction of the cost of other places. It is important to remember that you will have to set up seating and offer shelter for your guests, which could add on to the cost.

It is not uncommon for couples planning for their wedding to lose sight of the purpose of the event. Remember that the wedding ceremony itself is what is important and that your reception is the celebration and party element that simply compliments your union to your partner. Put in the effort to make your ceremony just as memorable as your reception.

When you find yourself engaged and have selected a wedding date for a year ahead, you need to get the ball rolling with a few other details that will help you in the months to come. These things include the type of wedding you are going to have, the theme, the size of the guest list you will be inviting, the location of the ceremony and who the members of your bridal party will be.
